02	Media and Gender representation in Crime reporting: An overview of Online News Portals of Bangladesh	 Mr. Mustafizur Rahman Masters student at Ghanshyamdas Saraf College, University of Mumbai & Prof. Jitendra Nayak 	Crime is something contradictory with running laws and constitution of a country. Crime is one of the major elements of journalism. If we look closely to any media, we can easily see that crime reporting is present, but the problem is how much media follows the principle of gender equality and ethics. If we consider the aspect of Bangladeshi Online News Portals, it is horrible to mention that inside a crime report, there is a crime done by the reporters and media houses in term of the language, word selection, sentence making, & gender sensitivity. The current scenario of crime reporting, pertaining to unequal treatment of gender in Digital Media of Bangladesh has been described here. Keywords: Gender, Media, Crime, Equality, Online

Media Representation of Women in Political, Economic and Sports news: An Analysis on Five Online News Portals of Bangladesh

Women is considered and portrayed low in the Bangladeshi social structure. They are reduced to a being who is surrounded by four walls of the home and is confined to the role of a 'domestic worker' rather than a human being with needs and emotions. In recent times, things are changing at a slow pace. This wind of change is considered somehow positive for the women however, we are still far away from the reality to call this a revolutionary change. In Bangladeshi perspective, especially in politics, the main two popular leaders of two major political parties are women. However, the social construction of Bangladesh, especially in rural areas, is still believed that women are for housekeeping, giving birth and taking care of family members. Even in the Economic, Sports and Media sector- the inspiration or appreciation for women goes unrecognized. The study of the Online News Portals of Bangladesh, make it evident that media role in depicting women in all walks of social, economic, political and sports is not so healthy.
