Prof. Mamta Chhajjer

Assistant Professor, BCAF, Ghanshyamdas Saraf College.

Abstract

With the advent of globalization and liberalization, this world has become a global village thereby necessitating the preparation and presentation of Financial Statements as per International Standards. Move towards IFRS is an attempt to cater to this need. In Indian context, Convergence to IFRS led to IND AS which has been made applicable in a phased manner starting from year 2015. This paper is an attempt to study history of IAS and IFRS, need for convergence. Specifically, this paper highlights key differences between Ind AS 7, 8, 10, 24 and 33 and its corresponding IFRS.

Keywords: IFRS, IAS, IASB, MCA, GAAP

1. Introduction

1.1 Introduction to IAS and IFRS

Indian Accounting Standards (abbreviated as Ind AS) in India were issued under the supervision and control of the Accounting Standards Board (ASB), which was constituted in the year 1977. ASB is a committee under the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India (ICAI). Presently, the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India (ICAI) has issued 39 Indian Accounting Standards (Ind AS) which have been notified under the Companies (Indian Accounting Standards) Rules, 2015 ('Ind AS Rules'), of the Companies Act, 2013. The Ind AS are named and numbered in the same way as the International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS).

14. Marketing Mix of Coca-Cola in India

Shaurya Shrivastava

Student, FY BCAA, Ghanshyamdas Saraf College of Arts and Commerce.

Abstract

Coca-Cola is a very strong company with a very strong marketing mix combination. It has been very efficient in being able to implement the proper strategies in a correct manner to profit from it. It has some of the most famous and innovative marketing strategies that not only helped it gain customers but also created a lot of goodwill for the company in the market. Its most recent campaign called 'Share A Coke' is a very practical and important strategy implemented in the international market. Its diverse range of products and a very well-established distribution and promotional channel makes it a very successful and efficient organization. Coca-Cola now serves 1.6 billion people each day, which is almost $\frac{2}{7}$ th of the world population!

Keywords: Coca Cola, Marketing Mix

Introduction

The marketing mix (also known as the 4 Ps or 7 Ps) is a foundational model in marketing. The marketing mix has been defined as the "set of marketing tools that the firm uses to pursue its marketing objectives in the target". Thus, it is a four-tier (sometimes 7 tier) marketing decision made by companies, namely: Product, Price, Place, Promotion, People, Process and Physical Evidence.

Given the valuation of customers towards potential product attributes (in any category, e.g. product, promotion, etc.) and the attributes of the products sold by other companies, the problem of selecting the attributes of a product to maximize the number of customers preferring it is a computationally intractable problem.

By the 1980s, a number of theorists were calling for an expanded and modified framework that would be more useful to service marketers. The prospect of expanding or modifying the marketing mix for services was a core discussion topic at the inaugural AMA Conference dedicated to Services Marketing in the early 1980s and built on earlier theoretical works pointing to many important problems and limitations of the 4 Ps model. Taken collectively, the papers presented at that conference indicate that service marketers were thinking about a revision to the general marketing mix based on an understanding that services were

16. Holistic Education - A Necessity for Success

Sakshi Chandak

Student, M.Com Part II, Ghanshyamdas Saraf College of Arts & Commerce, Mumbai

Education is the most powerful weapon we can use to change the world.

- Nelson Mandela

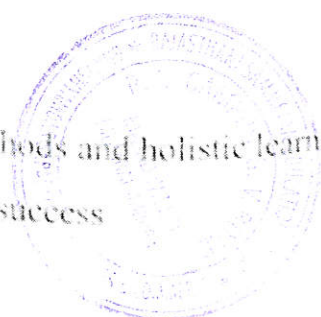

Abstract

In today's time, the length of the average workday gets longer, vacations get shorter, and the amount of free time is rapidly decreasing. And while many people would argue that such a lifestyle and work environment is just a requirement of today's fast-paced global economic community, one could just as easily argue that such a lifestyle does not begin in the executive boardroom, but instead begins much earlier in life. Just as businesses put pressure on their employees to succeed, more than ever, parents, teachers, schools, and communities place pressure on students to succeed so that success later in life is assured. However, even children's time is limited and as a result, time that used to be spent on play and fitness have now been replaced with studies and hard skills. Thus, children have less exposure to fitness and recreation. As they grow older, these habits are not built into their lives. Hence, when today's students reach adulthood, they are just added to the high-stress, work ethic discussed above and instead of having mechanisms to cope with such lifestyles, these adults find that they have difficulty handling these lifestyles because they lack habits that would relieve daily stress. As a result, one could argue that health, fitness, and recreation should be essential parts of any curriculum for students from pre-school through college in order to assure that once these students reach adulthood and begin working in today's high-stress world, they will be not only be able to effectively cope with the day-to-day stress that they will encounter, but also achieve success in whatever field they opt for.

Objective of the Study

This study is an attempt to emphasise on

- The difference between traditional rote learning methods and holistic learning
- The need for Holistic Education in order to achieve success
- The skills theory of success

17. A Study on Insurance Sector: Key Influences and their Impact

Dimple Deepak Thanvi

Student, BMS, Ghanshyamdas Saraf College.

Abstract

This paper aims to highlight the recent changes in the insurance industry with special reference to consumer behaviour. Whether it is identifying changes in consumer behaviour or the role of technology in modifying the industry, the industry has witnessed various unconventional methods to improve efficiency and increase consumer satisfaction. By analysing the use of Artificial intelligence, role of actuaries and technology, new product advances, privatisation, Insurtech; this study can help us assess how the insurance sector has transformed over the years with special reference to the Indian market in some key areas. A combination of primary and secondary research has been used to gain a better, clearer understanding of the trends. While the secondary research concentrates on identification of key changes in the industry, the primary research is focused on identifying consumer behaviour toward insurance.

Introduction

Insurance is defined as, an arrangement by which a company or the state undertakes to provide a guarantee of compensation for specified loss, damage, illness, or death in return for payment of a specified premium. To the vast majority, insurance is "preparing for a rainy day". While this may be a rather vague phenomenon to understand this term, the lay man identifies it as "pooling of resources to help the needy over time. In 1999, the Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority of India, an autonomous, statutory body that aims to protect the interests of the policyholders, regulates, promotes and ensures orderly growth of the insurance in India, was formed.

Methods

A questionnaire was forwarded among 68 people, involving ages 18 to 65. The questionnaire aimed to find out consumers' perception toward insurance services.

It included 10 questions, 5 of which needed close ended answers and the rest open ended answers. The sample was selected over different age groups and work profiles to arrive on the

1. Role of Financial System in Economic Development

Mebin Ann Varghese

Student, SYBFM, Ghanshyamdas Saraf College of Arts and Commerce.

Abstract

The coercion to uplift an economy in a right way to growth is more a mystery than a fact. Economic growth is the major intent of every nation that contributes towards its development but there are certain hurdles such as over population illiteracy and political instability that hold back their economic growth. Economic growth and development of every nation depends upon the role of financial institution and the ultimate financial development. Policymakers and economists generally agree that financial development contribute towards financial institutions and markets such as commercial and the investment banks, bond and stock exchanges which in turn lead to economic growth.

Present study attempts to explain that what is the role of financial system in economic development..

Keywords: Financial system, Economic Development

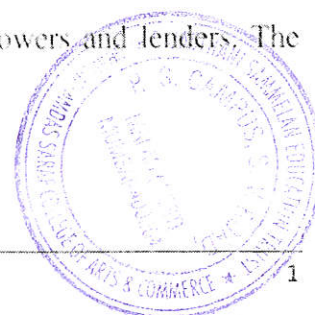

Introduction

The former British Prime Minister William Gladstone expressed the importance of finance for the economy in 1858 as follows:

"Finance is, as it were, the stomach of the country, from which all the other organs take their tone."

The financial system market all financial markets, instruments and institutions. Today I would like to address the issue of whether the design of the financial system matters for economic development. My view is that the answer to this question is yes.

Financial markets play a vital role in the allocation of resources and operation of modern economies. Financial markets create products that provide a return for those who have excess funds (Investors/lenders), making these funds available to those who need additional money (borrowers). They provide a market that bridges the gap between borrowers and lenders. The 'price' established in this market is the rate of interest.

Abstract

Education is the mirror of the society and is the seed as well as the flower of the socioeconomic development. It transforms human being from ignorance to enlightenment, from shades of social backwardness to the light of light of social amelioration and a nation from underdevelopment to faster social and economic development. Education is the true alchemy that can bring India its next golden age. The motto is unambiguous : ALL FOR KNOWLEDGE AND KNOWLEDGE FOR ALL.

86th amendment to the constitution of India has made free and compulsory education for children between 6-14 age groups a fundamental right. Not only literacy but also regional, social, gender, and caste-based inequality in literacy are some of the features of literacy in India. The exclusion of girls and other marginalized sections of society has remained a great concern in primary education in India. Way back what an educational expert J P Naik said holds true even today. He said that "The largest beneficiaries of our education system are the boys, the people of urban area, the middle and the upper classes.

Introduction

Ultimately, the technical definition of a rural school corresponds to our general understanding of rural areas; they are characterized by geographic isolation and small population size. All schools are categorized into four locales by their size, population density and location. Mahatma people are a prerequisite for both preserving and developing the society. In rural India, access to education in various spheres such as social, political, economic, scientific and others can act as a catalyst to change. In today's rural India, many castes have successfully utilized education to break through social and cultural norms associated with their castes and have also helped in their economic betterment.

Throughout one's life, from birth till death, an individual goes through a process of continued learning. Learning is a fundamental social process. It helps individuals in adapting to changes in the environment by building on the previous experience. Learning refers to the accumulation of a body of information that serves as guide to actions and decisions. It is also

Abstract

The objective of this paper is to better comprehend the relationship between accounting and auditing factors and the measured level of corruption in the global context. This relationship is studied in this paper is designed such that by performing a multinational analysis using public data to span accounting quality, audit quality, and corruption, consistent with our predictions, we find evidence that accounting and auditing quality are axiomatically analogous to the level of perceived corruption in a country. These discoveries advocate that nations with more clear reporting have lower levels of anticipated corruption and that the level of recognized corruption may be decreased in a country by reconstructing accounting and auditing quality. The practical suggestions indicate that countries can reduce the level of observed corruption by improving the transparency of financial reporting by convalescent accounting and auditing standards. While significant amounts of research has examined heeded corruption, this study is an endeavour to address the impact of high quality accounting information on the level of perceived corruption.

1. Introduction

Auditing and accounting standards pursue to make financial information limpid, vindicating the threat that those with economic power act in ways that are unethical, illegal, or unbecoming. The purpose of accounting and auditing standards are to make it more intricate for managers of organizations to perform converse to the conjecture of shareholders. When competent accounting standards exist, organizations are required to reveal information in ways that make pellucid, accurate, and comparable financial information. In fact, as Hall and Yago indicate, "A key reason for keeping transactions secret is to conceal corrupt practices. With transparency comes prying eyes."

Investment is defined as the process of investing savings with the hope of receiving a greater amount in the future. Individuals in India have multiplicity of avenues wherein savings can be invested. The present study aims to find out the preferences of individuals of Mumbai with regards to investment avenues. Findings of the study reveal that majority of the individuals (57%) were investing their savings and traditional avenues of investments viz Fixed Deposits and Mutual Funds were the most preferred ones. 1.1 Introduction

An individual is always in the process of earning and spending money for major part of his life. The imbalances between current income and consumption needs makes an individual borrow or save money for maximizing the long run benefits. In a situation, where current income is greater than current consumption desires, individuals end up saving money which can be channelized to multiple uses. One such use is that individuals give up immediate possession of savings for receiving a higher amount of money which will be available for future consumption.

Specifically, an investment is the current commitment of dollars for a period of time in order to derive future payments that will compensate the investor for (i) the time the funds are committed, (ii) the expected rate of inflation and (iii) the uncertainty of future payments. This definition includes all types of investors and investments. (Reilly and Brown, 2009)

In India, individuals can invest in variety of investment avenues depending upon their risk appetite. There are two buckets that investment products fall into - financial and

Abstract

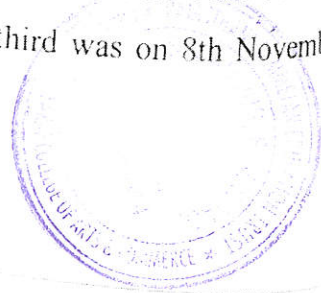

The word demonetization became a part of everyday vocabulary on November 8, 2016 when Prime Minister Sh. Narendra Modi announced note ban. The main motto of demonetization was to reduce dependence on cash and transform Indian economy to cashless economy. In other countries of the world, 40% - 60% transactions are made cashless whereas in India cash is the most preferred medium for doing any transaction. The present study attempts to find out the impact of demonetization on payment methods used by individuals after demonetization. The findings of the study reveal that though digital/cashless payments have increased after demonetization, still cash is the most widely used method while making payments for vegetables, groceries and travelling expenses. But for shopping apparels, shoes, accessories, individuals are making greater use of digital mediums like credit/debit cards and mobile wallets. This signifies demonetization has not fully succeeded in making India a cashless economy, but it has laid the background for transforming Indian economy to cashless economy.

Abstract

Organizational Structure can improve the working condition of an organization. A poor structure can ruin all the possibilities of openness, dynamism and decision-making. Organizational effectiveness on the other hand, is the extent to which an organization uses certain resources and means, achieves its objectives without placing undue strain on its resources. Another important role is played by the technology. More an organization is able to adapt to the changing technology the better will be its efficiencies. In the present research, the relationship between the designs of an organization with its operational efficiency has been examined in the context of Amul. The factors were studied in context to a cooperative organization it was found that the design of the basic structure is somewhat different. Amul believes in the federal form of structure. Each unit is independent of each other. It is a common belief that co-operatives are a failure, but Amul with Co-operative Structure is a grand success.

ABSTRACT

The current influx of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Machine Learning (ML) is a result of the quest to manage large data whilst saving time, energy and resources. Several entities have accepted the use of AI and ML in their day to day activities. In as much as AI and ML are very beneficial to the current corporate world, others have had the views that AI and ML will rather affect the staffing and thence reduce the number of workers and increase unemployment. Other schools of thought have argued that AI and ML would rather increase efficiency of staff and create more employment rather than reducing employment. As the field of Accounting has not been left out in the current trend of AI and ML application, this paper makes an attempt to delve into the effects that AI and ML has on the future practice of Accounting in corporate organizations. Data is analyzed from secondary sources and results, findings and conclusions are given in the detailed work.

INTRODUCTION

Since the first time accounting records were kept in America, bookkeepers have used a number of different tools to help in their profession. The addition of machine in 1890 helped early accountants calculate receipts faster, and they were able to quickly reconcile their books. When IBM released the first computer in 1952, accountants were among the first to use them. And recent advents in technology have taken accounting into the realm of computer software like QuickBooks. These new advancements are much more intuitive, helping accountants do their job quicker and with more ease. Technology has changed the way we look at accounting today. (Investopedia 2019)

The introduction of computers and the usage of ERPs brought about the ability to process lots of transactions easier and faster, increased data security and hence efficiency. The introduction of computers seemed not enough for today's world, looking at the increasing requirements for big data processing and speed at which work is required to be done in recent times. Gradually, today's world has evolved further into the world of Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning.

According to Jariwala (2015) AI tools and applications are being developed to think, feel, and react like living creatures. How can accountants navigate their way in this emerging world of still developing, and possibly little-understood, technologies? Could AI bring about entirely new classes of products and services, create new markets, and generate large gains for inventors?

According to Griffin (2019), in 2015 the UK media predicted that accountants have a 95% chance of losing their jobs as machines take over the number crunching and data analysis.

The question therefore is, "will Artificial Intelligence replace the entirety of the accounting profession, or it will rather increase the efficiency of the profession?"

The immediate contribution of Information and Communication to Aggregate Demand and Manufacturing Sector, and the indirect impact of ICT on Total Factor Productivity Growth (TFPG) through the utilization of ICT in Business Operations.

This paper uniquely examines the perspectives sounding a notion that ICT in businesses is the game changer for economic growth. It analyses the findings from different sources that shows that ICT has impact in business various Companies departments such as Production, Sales and Marketing, Human Resources, Finance, Accounting, as well as Research and Development.

Information and Communication Technology helps to improve business activities and henceforth driving the growth of the Country. With growing pace of Globalization, companies are facing stiff competition that forces them to adopt new technological innovation in business. In recent days, ICT has taken utmost importance in improving efficiency in both production and service sectors. Indian Companies are not lagging behind in adopting initiatives that improves and galvanize the economy. This has helped Indian Companies to foster in technological advancement and hence Economic Growth.

Finally, the paper open avenues for further studies on ICT investment in Manufacturing Sector as some factories are still using outdated technology in production processes.

Keywords: Business, Information and Communication Technology and Economic Growth.

INTRODUCTION

The prevalent use of Information and Communication Technology (ICT) in modern businesses has been expanding economies of typically developing countries like India. Progresses in ICT have typically provided societies and viable businesses with a broad array of new Communication abilities. These developments have been hailed as "probable goldmines" for economic growth. For instance, people from diverse countries are capable to communicate in real-time using Voice over IP (VoIP) and Video conferencing. Additionally, ICT platforms like Facebook and WhatsApp have ultimately enabled countless people to instantly communicate on a consistent basis. As a likely result of current ICT, there has been a fundamental conception of "the global village" (Technology Dictionary, 2010). It is in this so-called global village that individuals, businesses, and societies are able to connect at both national and global levels as if they are living in the adjacent apartments.

Information and Communication Technology helps businesses to offer personalized solutions to many business scenarios. Indeed, India has benefited tremendously from modern ICT developments. However, the big question remains: are these developments with regards to business shaping the economy? If so how? The research question is:

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE IN BUSINESS-PROCESS RE-ENGINEERING & OTHER HR FUNCTIONS

Jayraj J. Chavan

Student T.Y. BMS (HR)

Abstract

This paper describes the integration of AI planning and Business-process reengineering (BPR), a generic term covering a variety of perspectives on how to change organizations. For more than a decade, artificial intelligence techniques have served as critical building blocks for cutting edge business applications. The first wave of AI based tools & applications for business process modeling (BPM) is just hitting the shore. Organizations such as IBM, EDS, the US Army, & Swiss Bank are among the first to adopt AI for BPM. Some are using traditional KBS tools such as ART*Enterprise & ProKappa, while others are turning to ReThink, the first AI tool designed specifically for BPM.

Keywords: Business-process reengineering, BPR, Artificial Intelligence

Introduction to AI in BPR

Business-process reengineering (BPR) is a general term encompassing a range of perspectives on how to bring more productive changes in organizations. There are at least two distinct roles for Artificial Intelligence (AI) in BPR. A role of AI in BPR is as an enabling technology for reengineered processes. The second role is less common but potentially important, in the tools to support the change process itself. Fundamentally, any business can be observed as an assemblage of processes that when taken together, respond to the demands of the customer by inventing, producing, delivering, & billing for goods & services. Although these processes differ from business to business, in a predominant number of cases, these processes & the institutions that implement them have not been engineered in any meaningful sense. These processes seem to have evolved over time in response to their business environments. Changing environments frequently defenestrate such companies from the competition unless they make a cognizant & recurrent, if not a continuous effort to reengineer these processes to bring changes in customer needs, suppliers & innovation in technology. Looking at a business as a compendium of customer-oriented processes is the core of business process reengineering (BPR), a generic term comprising a variety of perspectives, none of which are particularly rigorous on how to bring change in organizations. Even though, it is easy to set aside BPR as hype, but the phenomenon is tremendously important. (Caldwell 1994) In 1993, 60 percent of the management letters appearing with Fortune 500 company annual reports explicitly discussed reengineering efforts that were currently under way. It was recently projected that the annual market for BPR services in companies based in the United States at $1.8 billion. Another projection predicts a growth of 20% per capita from 1994 to 1996. To assess the long-term impact of this, one ought to consider a multiple of this figure as the cost diminutions & enhancements in revenue brought about by today's reengineering. There is hype, nevertheless, the phenomenon is real.

Roles of AI in BPR

As mentioned above, there are two distinct roles for AI in Business-process Re-engineering. An archetypal success story of this sort places an expert system in the hands of a single employee who then may be able to carry out various steps of a process for a single consumer or order rather than having several workers in different departments handling

USE OF INFORMATION COMMUNICATION TECHNOLOGY AND ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE IN INVESTMENT BANKING

Anjali Jain

Post Graduate Student

ABSTRACT

ICT & Artificial Intelligence is a coming-of-age and tipped to be the next big thing in the digital era that we know now. One of the areas that will be largely affected is Finance. Asset management is the industry most likely to be confronted by AI and there has been a lot of speculation suggesting that managing portfolios will soon become a robot's routine job. Another potential that can be derived from AI is biometric identification. When ICT & AI become mainstream, at least among banks, those jobs would be automated. It is expected that 4,000 investment banking jobs will disappear by 2025. However, we would expect to see an increase in technology-related jobs such as data analytics and programming.

1. Introduction

Information Communication Technology (ICT) is utilization of electronic systems to handle financial transactions. The major aspects of any finance organization runs basically on their systems; whereas AI is made up of algorithms that work together to formulate meaningful responses and actionable insights. We have all heard about automation, the idea of making things work by itself as if they were robots. Artificial Intelligence encompasses more than just automation. Machine learning is an extended form of automation that stems from the experiential learning ability of AI to remember all the steps that were performed by users without being explicitly programmed; it is continuously bound to improve decision-making with more data raked in.

1.1 Impact of ICT & AI in Investment Banking

Investment banks are typically made up of three operating arms: Sales & Trading, Corporate Finance and Research. When AI takes over investment banking, it will impact all three areas. AI should enable greater efficiency and cost savings through powerful interpretation of data, ease of use, and economies of scale.

In the Sales & Trading department, we will soon witness salespeople being replaced with digital assistants. Natural Language Processing (NLP), the ability of computer programs to understand the human speech, will play a big part in eradicating conversational, client-facing sales roles in investment banks. Traders can become obsolete with the arrival of AI, which is set to offer high-speed and ultra-precision in executing trades by the second. In fact, there has been a 20%-30% reduction in the front office sales and trading headcount over the past few years. Data mining can also provide traders with alerts about new investment opportunities.

The Corporate Finance department is what usually composes the majority of an investment bank's businesses. With the arrival of ICT & AI, the massive amounts of data that investment banking analysts have to collect should be available to sort from in a nick of time. Searching for internal documents can take up 1.5 hours a day on average for analysts. Using advanced interpretation of key words when performing searches.

The Research department can realize the true value of IT & Artificial Intelligence systems through improved accessibility of public information. However, as a sell-side business, the reports generated for buy-side firms tend to be biased towards the issuing investment bank. The Research team can harness artificial intelligence systems by automating basic financial processes and facilitating the creation of neutral investment recommendations.
