

SURVEY ON IMPACT OF PARTICIPATION IN SOCIAL OUTREACH PROGRAMS ON PERSONAL GROWTH

To gauge the impact of participation in various social outreach programs on students, a survey was conducted to analyse how these activities positively influence their personal development, skills, empathy, and overall engagement with community issues.

The survey on the impact of participation in social outreach programs shows that such activities positively influence personal growth of the students. Respondents highlighted improvements in skills, communication, empathy for community issues, and leadership abilities. They also reported increased awareness of environmental issues, a stronger sense of responsibility as citizens, and greater confidence in making ethical decisions. Additionally, participation in these programs helped clarify career goals and inspired continued community involvement, demonstrating the significant benefits of engaging in social outreach activities. Overall, these activities contribute to shaping well-rounded individuals who are more engaged and responsible members of society. Following
